Bottlenose dolphin (Tursiops sp.)

Adult length: 2.45-3.8m

Adult weight: up to 500kg (male)

Newborn: 84-14cm /14-20kg

A sharp crease between the beak and the forehead

Dark bluish grey or brownish grey cape, which is more pronounced in Indo-Pacific

A prominent recurved dorsal fin with a slightly hooked tip and a broad base

Thick tail stock

A pronounced beak which varies in thickness and length; it is generally more slender and longer on Indo-Pacific than common bottlenose dolphins

Moderately long dark slender flippers with pointed tips and a broad base

Underside can be off-white, light grey or pinkish – and may be speckled in some populations of Indo-Pacific bottlenose dolphins

Males and females are difficult to distinguish at sea – but only females will accompany calves, and males may have more scarring from aggressive interactions with other males.
